

Jimmy,

Did you see the news about the Fraser Institute's anti-tax announcement?

Every June, the Fraser Institute repackages their misleading "Tax Freedom Day" calculations and makes news by claiming that the "average" Canadian pays an exorbitant tax bill. This month we took the Fraser Institute's annual so-called "Tax Freedom Day" head-on and set the record straight.

We published a report, The Brass Tax, that made headlines across the country and presented new data that clears the air on what Canadians actually pay in taxes.

The report completely overshadowed the media coverage of the Fraser Institute's so-called "Tax Freedom Day." Media outlets that normally give the Fraser Institute a free pass finally started calling into question their methodology, citing our research.

Jimmy, I can't tell you how proud we are of this work. It is exactly the type of hard-hitting research that holds the right wing accountable. This is the work that the Broadbent Institute was built to do.

But the truth is, it took a lot of work and resources to pull off. And I'm sure you'd agree it was worth it. So, can you help us make sure it gets read by thousands of Canadians?

We're asking all of our allies to please share this report far and wide with your colleagues and union members. Click here to download the report and share.

I remember before the Broadbent Institute got started I would get so frustrated listening to the news with media outlets giving the Fraser Institute a free pass - remember those days?

Well, I can assure you, thanks to our supporters like you, those days are now long gone.

In solidarity,

Josh

--

Josh Bizjak
Director of Development
Broadbent Institute

Broadbent Institute · Canada